

Glenn Shimkus is currently a member of the DocuSign Advisory Board and most recently served as the Vice President of Product at DocuSign, where he led the company's Global Real Estate Solutions product team from roadmap to execution. Previously, he was a co-founder and CEO of Cartavi, which was acquired by DocuSign in 2013. He is a technology enthusiast, gadget aficionado, and entrepreneur with more than 20 years of experience in the fields of transaction/document management, mobile applications, and cloud computing. A recognized thought leader in the real estate industry, Glenn has been named one of the 100 Most Influential People in Real Estate by Inman News, and one of the 200 Most Powerful People in Real Estate by New York Times best-selling author Stefan Swanepoel. He is also very active in the tech and real estate communities and serves as a Board member for the Real Estate Standards Organization, is a mentor for several incubators/accelerators, is an investor in many early stage tech companies, is on several Boards and an advisor to many companies and advises two venture capital funds.